

PERISHED BY FIRE.

Twenty-six Miners Hurtled to Death in a Mexican Col-
lery.

Eagle Pass, Texas, June 4—Twenty-six miners, employed in the Fuente coal mine, in Mexico, four miles from here, were burned to death yesterday afternoon.

The Mexican International railway, which recently came into the possession of the mine, is operating a narrow gauge road with a small locomotive, which penetrates the main entry, hauling in empty and bringing out loaded cars. This main entry is lined on the sides and at the top with cross-hatched lumber, and three air shafts supply the mine with ventilation. The entrance to the track is on the north side of a hill, through which it passes on an incline to the north of the top of the banks of the Escamela. The workings are all to the east of the main entry and fifty men were employed taking out coal.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, shortly after the locomotive left, the mine was discovered to be on fire and smoke and flames were seen issuing out of the shaft. About one-half of the miners were working near the main tunnel and these made their escape, leaving twenty-six of their number to perish from the heat and smoke and from the poisonous gases which issued like lightning to every corner of the mine. The miners employed were Mexicans, and most of them left destitute families. It is reported that the porous responsibility for the management of the mine have been placed under arrest pending an investigation of the cause of the disaster. But for the prompt action of the officials of the Mexican National railway and their heroic efforts, the same would have been destroyed, and none of the bodies would have been recovered. This is the first disaster in the history of coal mining in Mexico. Large numbers of friends and relatives of the unfortunate miners are gathered at the mouth of the mine patiently awaiting the recovery of the bodies of their sons and husbands. When a body is taken out there is an outburst of grief but a look of quiet resignation and deep grief appears on every countenance.

An Editor's Prayer.

The following over the non de-plume of "Unknown Author," appeared in a recent number of the Ocean
Capital. Forward, turn forward, oblige in your right, turn me a fortune and set me up right. I am weary of counting in debt for my clothes and owing for grub that down my throat gives weary of working for what I have not, weary of working for what I have got. Never, no never, turn backward for me, far well I remember my good mother's knee; I remember the slipper came down with a slam
whenever I got in the blackberry jam.
The days, too, at school were a terrible bore, when I was obliged to stand on the floor, and all in the world that I ever drew was to wink at a girl—pure nature of fun. The days of the past, like days that we meet, compas-
of a fair mixture of bitter and sweet, so forward, turn forward old time, in your way, and give me some cash just enough for today.

Louisville, January 30, 1893.

Govt. While attending the Memphis Fair some months ago, I was attacked with severe pains in my arms and legs, the result of a cold taken on my way to meet your agent there. Mr. Barker, who is a old friend, and he insisted that I use the Electroscop in his office, which I did with wonderful results. In a short time my arms and legs, and I concluded to rent a "Poser." When my rental time had expired I bought it, and would not part with it for any consideration. It is certainly a wonderful instrument, and it is much more than a "Poser," as you say. I feel yet it does it. I think it is the duty of every man to make known to his neighbors anything that will be of any benefit to them, and the Electroscop certainly will.

The World's Fair was open again last Sunday. Chicago is a big city; bigger than the Congress of the United States. Congress says, "No Fair on Sunday." Chicago decrees otherwise and otherwise it is.

A Frankfort correspondent thinks the Legislature can wind up its business and adjourn by July 1, and possibly by June 29. What the Legislature can do and what it will do have so far in its history been different things.

Hereafter the Governor's salary in Kentucky will be $6,500 without any "perquisites." It is a wonder that some men did not want to give the Governor the "perquisites" without any $6,500, as the latter would be useful in perpetuating the life of the legislature.

A Frankfort letter under date of Tuesday says: "The proposed Dog Tax law was given its third reading, and was made a special order for Thursday. We will take part of it back, gentlemen, and if you will pass that Dog Tax, all will be forgiven."

The Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners are having a difficult time in disposing of the convict labor. They advertised to secure bids for the leasing of convicts in Frankfort prison; one bid was received and that was from the Mason-Ford Company. The labor of the convicts appears to be of no more profit to the State than the labor of the Legislature.

Russville is wrestling with the "blind tiger," and if all of her lawyers are like Hon. John S. Blea the "blind tiger" had as well tuck his caudal appendage and take to the jungle, for that would be his inevitable fate. A public meeting was held to discuss the matter, and says the Ledger:

"Hon. John S. Blea was present and was called on for a speech. He responded in his usually vigorous style and was applauded to the echo. He said, among other things, that the 'blind tigers' could be broken up, and that, specifically, if those who vote against saloons would make an honest effort to that end. 'First let me say, I wish to give my prohibition friends a little wholesome advice. Stop drinking. Keep that jug out of your house, your office and your business houses. If we are to break up the 'tigers' the honesty of our efforts must not be given the lie by our action. We must be consistent, and if those who voted against saloons will do their duty, in forty-eight hours every 'blind tiger' in Russellville will be closed.' He said further that he had not patronized these dens and would not accept fees from those who operated them, but offered his services free of charge to assist in prosecuting them."

A row over a Democratic primary election in Bell county Saturday ended in the death of Joe Jones, who was shot by Levi Hoskins. Nothing so serious happened in our primaries, which occurred on the same day, nevertheless four little legislative bones are corpses.

Up in Illinois a mob took a negro from jail and hung him; absolutely long the poor fellow until he was dead, dead, dead. The crime he committed was of the same character for which they hang them down South, and for which the people of the South are abused "up in Illinois."

P. C. Stephens Hopes to Catch the Senatorial Nominating yet.

Monday Mr. P. C. Stephens called upon the Press, and said that he had a word or two he would like to go to the public through his columns. "I am," said he, "by no means out of the fight. The result in Crittenden is not what I expected, and, some of my friends feel that it is not exactly what it should be; I do not want to kick, nor grumble, I always want fair play, nothing more and nothing less. I want my friends in the other counties to understand that I still in the ring, and if they fail me not, I will get the Democratic nomination for Senator in this district, and if nominated I will win the fight."

A Picnic On a Farm

In a sequestered, wooded spot, by a cooling stream—a very pleasant contemplation this for city folk.

They wonder why it is that the farmer does not more frequently go picnicking—why he does not get more enjoyment out of life. They do not realize that the now-days farmer finds enjoyment in his work.

The McCormick Machine of Steel is one of the modern pleasure-inviting acquisitions of the farmer. It is such a handy machine and so reliable in its performance that the old-time dread of harvest is done away with. The makers of the McCormick get many of their ideas from the farmers and crystalize them into practical working mechanisms.

You can O. K. the hints you get from the practical farmers—perhaps that's why the practical farmers O. K. the "Machine of Steel." It's made to meet their needs. The McCormick Catalogue is invaluable to the farmer after improved harvesting machinery.
